Workplace First Aid

Recommendations and guideline standards for workplace first aid provision in the UK are provided by the two main official bodies of The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and The British Standards Institute (BSI).

Whilst these recommendations may set out the minimum guidelines, all workplaces must undertake a First Aid Risk Assessment to ensure that their individual first aid provision meets the needs and risks associated with the actual working activities undertaken at any given site.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE)

Under The Health and Safety (First Aid) Regulations 1981, the HSE have issued official guidance for employers on managing the provision of first aid in the workplace. The HSE Guidance on Regulations (publication L74) applies to all employers and provides guidance on managing first aid (kit types, equipment and facilities), first aid personnel (cover levels, training and appointed persons) and first aid awareness across the workplace.

The British Standards Institute (BSI)

As a world renown standards authority the BSI have developed a full set of first aid kit recommendations that build upon the requirements of The Health and Safety (First Aid) Regulations 1981. The British Standard BS 8599-1 specification for the contents of workplace first aid kits recommends appropriate equipment and consumables for addressing injury risks across a range of environments.

To comply with these regulations and standards we offer a great choice of kits that are carefully designed to meet the HSE or BS recommendations.

HSE first aid kits

Whilst The HSE issue a basic list of items recommended for workplace kits, it is stipulated that the kit contents and the equipment available must be 'adequate and appropriate in the circumstances'. Each employer is responsible for performing ongoing detailed risk assessments to ensure that the first aid provision remains appropriate to the workplace concerned.

British Standard BS8599-1:2019 first aid kits

BSI kits feature additional and more comprehensive contents to those minimum requirements set out in the L74 Guidance on Regulations. These kits are developed with further items intended to address a wider range of the more common workplace risks.

The BS8599-1 standards establish enhanced minimum first aid kit recommendations that take account of the varying provision levels suitable for the risk category and the number of workers in the assessed workplace.

Updated for 2019

What size of kit do I need?

In assessing the most appropriate size of kit, consideration should be given to both the level of risk and the number of employees in the workplace. The following table will provide general guidance, whilst actual requirements should be based upon a workplace specific risk assessment.

Category of hazard	No of Employees	Size of First Aid Kit
LOW HAZARD eg shops, offices, libraries etc	Less than 25	At least one small kit
	25-100	At least one medium kit
	More than 100	1 large kit per 100 employees
HIGH HAZARD eg light engineering and assembly work, food processing, warehousing, extensive work with dangerous machinery or sharp instruments, construction or chemical manufacturing	Less than 5	At least one small kit
	5-25	At least one medium kit
	More than 25	1 large kit per 25 employees

WATERPROOF ADHESIVE DRESSING

Qualicare Waterproof Adhesive Wound Dressings are great for covering larger wounds and abrasions that need to be kept dry and protected in order to speed the healing process. The low adherent dressing pad is held securely in place by the clear and discreet adhesive backing that is waterproof, light weight, soft and flexible.

The dressing is applied in two simple stages – firstly, the white paper adhesive covers should be removed and the dressing should be applied to the skin like a plaster in the usual way. Secondly, once the dressing is securely in place, the clear outer protective layer can be removed at the blue strip to reveal the soft and flexible waterproof layer.
